

TALLEY RIGGINS CONSTRUCTION GROUP PROMOTES JAMES EASTHAM TO DIRECTOR OF OPERATIONS

DALLAS, TX - Talley Riggins Construction Group recently promoted James Eastham to director of operations, a new position. Eastham previously served as project executive.

“Since James joined our firm in October 2019, he has led our lean construction initiatives which have contributed significantly to the growth of our firm,” said Doug Talley, CEO of Talley Riggins Construction Group. “His expertise in developing processes and leading project teams has helped us achieve efficiency across all of our job sites particularly in respect to project management, scheduling and project delivery.”

“James’ understanding of how critical the relationship is with all of our trade partners makes him uniquely suited for his new role at our firm,” said John Riggins, president of Talley Riggins Construction Group. “With his guidance, we have been able to meet our clients’ budgets and timelines on even the most challenging projects.”

“Although lean construction has been around for years, it has not been applied industry-wide,” said Eastham. “This method has become the cornerstone of Talley Riggins culture because it focuses on respect for all people – our employees, trade partners and clients. I look forward to expanding on the firm’s innovation in lean construction so we can continue to offer our clients value on their investment.”

Eastham has been recognized as an industry leader and has received numerous awards including AGC’s Willis Towers Safety Award and TEXO and Texas Building Branch’s Building Excellence Awards for multiple projects. He has also spoken on lean construction at events for local and national organizations.
